DETAILED ACTION

Specification

The application has not been checked to the extent necessary to determine the presence of all possible typographical and grammatical errors. Applicant's cooperation is requested in correcting any errors of which he/she may become aware in the application.

The Information Disclosure Statements filed 10/08/2004 have been considered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Fallah et al (US 2003/0051120) in view of Itakura et al (US 5,418,795).

Regarding claim 1, Fallah et al teach in figure (1) a method for the transmission of n binary signals through a bus (16) of m leads, characterized in that it comprises the following operations: compressing the signals to be transmitted using an encoder (20) in such a way as to reduce their number (See paragraphs [0026]; and, [0029], lines 8-12), wherein the number of leads on the bus (m) is less than the number of binary signals (n) due to the reduction; and decompressing the signals thus transmitted through the bus using a decoder (22) until their number is again equal to the number of the signals prior to encoding, i.e. reversing the encoding performed by the encoder (20) (See paragraph [0049]).

Fallah et al do not specifically teach a transmission method wherein the transmission is synchronous. However, the use of synchronous data transmission systems is well known, as evidenced by Itakura et al (US 5,418,795). Itakura et al teach in figure (1) a decoder apparatus wherein they teach the desirability of synchronous data transmissions (See column 3, lines 1-3). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to combine the teachings of Fallah et al and of Itakura et al to realize a data transmission system having improved performance and reliability because that would increase the data rate (See column 3, lines 1-3).

Objection To Claims

Claim 12 is objected to because of the following informalities: On line 4, the phrase "having a state" (second occurrence) should be deleted.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 2-5 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Claims 6-21 are allowable.

Citation of Relevant Prior Art

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure: Wilson et al (US 2003/0005189) teach a method for improving compression bandwidth for high-speed buses.
